WELCOME TO METRO.US

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Are you ready for another storm? Many areas throughout the Northeast are still recovering from the one that hit over the weekend, and forecasters are predicting another on the way. While it's not extremely rare for two nor'easters to hit back-to-back, it isn't something that happens often, a National Weather Service meteorologist said. I talked to him about what to expect when this wintry weather hits Wednesday and how this storm is different from the last. Read more on pages 6-7 and at metro.us.

EX-TRUMP AIDE SAYS HE WILL REFUSE SUBPOENA

1 A former campaign aide to President Donald Trump said on Monday he would not comply with a subpoena to testify before a grand jury in special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into Russian meddling in the 2016 U.S. election. Sam Nunberg helped advise Trump's presidential campaign, but he was fired in 2015 amid reports that he posted racially charged messages on Facebook. In interviews on multiple networks on Monday, Nunberg said he would refuse to comply with the subpoena. In doing so, he risks serving time in jail. "Let's see what Mr. Mueller does. ... I think it would be really, really funny if they wanted to arrest me because I don't want to spend 80 hours going over emails I had with Steve Bannon and Roger Stone," Nunberg told MSNBC, referring to two former Trump associates.

REPORT: KOREAN LEADERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME

2 North Korean leader Kim Jong Un met senior South Korean government officials for the first time and said it is his "firm will to vigorously advance" inter-Korean ties and pursue reunification, the North's official news agency said on Tuesday. A 10-member South Korean delegation traveled to the North Korean capital, Pyongyang, on Monday in hopes of encouraging North Korea and the United States to talk to one another. Washington and Pyongyang have been at loggerheads for months over the North's nuclear and missile programs, with President Donald Trump and Kim Jong Un trading insults and threatening war. Tensions between the two Koreas eased during the recent Winter Olympics in South Korea, where President Moon Jae-In hosted a high-level North Korean delegation.

US MILITARY SAYS IT MISHANDLED WAR DOGS

4 The U.S. Army confirmed on Monday that it had mishandled retired bomb-sniffing war dogs and said it would comply with recommendations in a Defense Department inspector general's report that called for reforms. In the report, the inspector general said that canine heroes, which saved the lives of U.S. soldiers in Afghanistan while working with brigade combat teams to sniff out bombs, were mistreated by the Army after they returned to the U.S. The report said that some dogs were left in kennels for up to 11 months, beyond a deadline for giving them away for adoption, or re-using them in the military or other agencies. It said they were mistreated through lack of attention, and others may have been put down. Contrary to military rules, new owners were not screened before the Army allowed them to adopt the dogs.

GOP SENATOR CALLS FOR HEARING ON TARIFFS

5 The Senate should hold hearings on President Donald Trump's proposed tariffs on foreign steel and aluminum, No. 2 Republican Sen. John Cornyn said on Monday. Noting that Trump was "pretty determined" to finalize the tariffs, Cornyn said he would meet with Senate Finance Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch to discuss the possibility of setting up a hearing. "I do think it would be appropriate for Congress to have hearings and listen to the experts and become a little bit better informed about this," Cornyn said, adding: "Clearly the president is listening to some people who have some ideas about trade that many of us don't share." President Donald Trump on Monday said he would not back down from his planned new tariffs on steel and aluminum imports, creating a possible standoff with top lawmakers from his own Republican party.

TRADE WAR

Following up on his announcement of increased tariffs for steel and aluminium, President Trump tweeted, "Trade wars are good, and easy to win." Do you agree or disagree?

To tackle congestion, city ups 'don't block the box' enforcement

NYPD officers "will be out in force" to issue summonses for box blockers at 50 key intersections across the city.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Box blockers beware: The NYPD is increasing enforcement of "don't block the box" street signs at 50 key intersections across the city, officials announced Monday.

Titled "Clear Intersections," the move is the latest in a series of initiatives announced last year to address New York City's congestion issues.

"Blocking the box is one area where focused NYPD enforcement can and will make a big difference to keep traffic moving around hot spots in every borough," Mayor Bill de Blasio said in a statement.

"Drivers who block intersections are contributing to overall congestion, and their disregard of this particular traffic rule comes at the expense of other drivers, including emergency vehicles," said NYPD Chief of Transportation Thomas Chan. "Additionally, pedestrians are endangered when they have to navigate between vehicles that are blocking crosswalks."

NYPD officers, Chan added, "will be out in force" issuing summonses to box blockers. Fifty additional uniformed officers have been hired to handle the uptick in enforcement, and violators will face minimum fines of $115 as well as possible points that could result in the loss of their driver's license.

As part of the Clear Intersections project, the city's Department of Transportation installed special markings or updated signage at the 50 hot spot intersections, which are in the vicinity of river crossings, highway on-ramps and commercial centers.

"We know traffic can be frustrating, but blocking the box just causes gridlock for everybody — bus riders, pedestrians, cyclists and your fellow motorists. Please be courteous and safe — and don't block the box," urged DOT Commissioner Polly Trottenberg.

NYC REAL ESTATE

Manhattan apartment sales plummet to 2012 low

Apartment sales in Manhattan fell to the lowest monthly rate in January since February 2012 as a declining trend in citywide sales both by price and volume emerged, listings and data website CityRealty said on Monday.

Across Manhattan, 840 co-ops and condos were sold in January, a 20.1 percent decline from a year ago, when 1,051 apartment sales were recorded, CityRealty said.

Data from the NYC Department of Finance showed 995 units were sold in December, a 15.6 percent decline, the firm noted.

Sales prices fell 15.5 percent to an average $1.86 million in January from an average $2.2 million a year earlier, while the average price in December fell 14.3 percent, from $2.17 million.

Data for January showed the lowest number of units sold since February 2012, when 799 sales were recorded at an average price of $1.5 million. Volume peaked in July 2013, when 1,721 units were sold.

One reason for the price decline was a lack of new condo buildings entering the market, where prices in the range north of $2 million have skewed the overall market, Warshawer said.

The average price of a condo was $2.8 million in January, compared with $1.3 million for co-ops, using data that excludes sales in upper Manhattan because of the area's low activity. Only 61 units were sold that month in upper Manhattan. REUTERS

A second to hit NYC

As the Northeast is still recovering from this past weekend's storm, another one is on the way, bringing wet, heavy snow and wind — and possibly more power outages — with it.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

As much of the Northeast is still reeling from this past weekend's storm, forecasters are predicting another nor'easter to hit this week.

The National Weather Service has issued a winter storm watch for most of New England, including the Boston area, down to New York City. The watch will go into effect early Wednesday morning through Thursday morning.

The storm could bring heavy, wet snow and wind to those areas, potentially dropping up to a foot of snow on some parts of the region.

Forecasters predicted that New York City is looking to get around 7 inches of snow, with parts of Long Island expected to get a mix of rain and snow.

Those areas might see some flurries on Tuesday, but the snow is expected to really start coming down Wednesday, starting in New York City in the afternoon.

The heaviest of the snowfall will happen Wednesday night into Thursday. Though the coastal flooding and high winds won't be as severe as with the last storm, this weather could still be dangerous, forecasters warned.

"Concern with this system is it's March so we are dealing with a heavy, wet snow," forecasters wrote. "This may result in a risk for down tree branches/limbs yielding the potential for additional power outages."

Apple confirms that iPhones can shut down in cold weather

Apple has finally confirmed that the iPhone battery life can be compromised when exposed to extreme cold weather.

Some iPhone users have reported that their iPhones shut down completely when it's cold outside. Sometimes it can occur when the iPhone battery level says you have more than enough juice left.

On Apple's support page, the company lists its acceptable operating temperatures for iPhones and other devices.

"Using an iOS device in very cold conditions outside of its operating range might temporarily shorten battery life and could cause the device to turn off." (Finally, some recognition that this doesn't happen to only you!) Apple adds, "Battery life will return to normal when you bring the device back to higher ambient temperatures."

According to Apple, their mobile devices work best at temperatures in the range of 32 to 95 degrees Fahrenheit.

Because many people carry their iPhones and other mobile devices at all times, we might forget that the small mobile devices that seem to have control over our lives can be extremely sensitive to adverse weather conditions.

Why does my iPhone battery die when it's cold outside?

While there could be several contributing factors to cause your iPhone to die when the weather is nor'easter this week

rare for two storms like this to happen back-to-back, said National Weather Service meteorologist Kevin Cadima, but still, it's "not something that happens very often," he said.

There are some differences between the storms. This oncoming storm is expected to be colder than the last, meaning forecasters expect more snow — whereas the last storm brought a lot of rain. Since it's still a few days out though, that could change.

"This is all track dependent," Cadima said. "If the track of the storm is further offshore, that'll result in a colder solution and result in more snow in the coastal areas. If it were to track a little further west, there will be a quicker change over to rain, so less snow and [more] heavy rainfall during the late Wednesday through Wednesday night time period."

The main difference with this oncoming storm will be the amount of flooding it could cause.

"Coastal flooding will not be as bad because the tides are significantly lower, so the wave action won't be as great as the last storm," Cadima said. "But we could see another round of minor coastal flooding with this storm as well."

New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo had issued a state of emergency, as well. As of Monday morning, Con Edison was still reporting more than 4,000 current outages in New York City and Westchester county, but the state saw many more over the weekend.

More than 360,000 New Yorkers were without power at the height of this storm, according to Cuomo's office, due to the strong winds, rain and snow that downed trees and power lines.

In New York City alone, that storm downed about 750 trees, according to Mayor Bill de Blasio's press secretary.

According to Apple, their mobile devices work best at temperatures in the range of 32 to 95 degrees Fahrenheit. GETTY IMAGES cold, one of the reasons is because of the battery it uses.

Apple iPhones use lithium-ion batteries which contain an electrolyte liquid inside the cells of it. When the weather becomes extremely cold, the liquid begins to crystallize or change density. When this happens, the liquid loses its ability to allow electricity to flow properly. This causes the battery to lose power quickly.

This explains why sometimes when you're outside in the cold weather and your phone may shut off completely even if your battery meter is at a normal level.

Fortunately, your iPhone returns back to "normal" when the device temperature warms back up, but it can be highly frustrating if you are in the middle of making a call, snapping a photo, or trying to figure out when your Uber is arriving and suddenly your phone shuts down unexpectedly.

Two killed and several injured in Bronx fire

The fast-moving fire in the Belmont neighborhood left two men dead and nearly a dozen others, including firefighters, injured.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Two men were killed and nearly a dozen others were injured in an early morning fire in the Bronx on Monday, officials said.

The blaze began around 1:30 a.m. on the first floor of 2381 Hoffman St. in the borough's Belmont neighborhood, the FDNY said, adding that the fire spread quickly, leaving several residents of the five-story building trapped.

Assistant FDNY Chief Roger Sakowich told the New York Daily News that firefighters "had to push the fire back" in the stairway to rescue the trapped residents.

Eight residents, including a 7-year-old girl, suffered injuries that included serious burns and smoke inhalation and were taken to area hospitals for treatment.

According to a tweet from the FDNY, three victims were seriously injured, and five civilians and five firefighters suffered non-life-threatening injuries.

Two men died after being trapped by the fire, the Daily News reported. They have not yet been identified.

The cause of the fire is still being investigated. It is believed that the blaze was able to spread so quickly because a door had been left open, which the FDNY confirmed in an afternoon tweet. "Fire marshals have determined that after the occupants of the fire apartment evacuated, the door remained open, allowing the fire to spread," the department wrote.

The New York Post reported that the Red Cross is offering aid to 20 residents who have been left homeless, including seven children.

SALES TAX

Trump administration backs states' bid to collect online sales taxes

The Trump administration on Monday said states should be able to require online retailers to collect sales taxes, backing an appeal by South Dakota at the U.S. Supreme Court that could mean billions of dollars in revenue for state coffers.

South Dakota is asking the justices to overturn a 1992 Supreme Court ruling that companies with no physical presence in a state are not required to collect a state sales tax on purchases. A lower court decision favored Internet retailers Wayfair Inc., Overstock.com Inc. and Newegg Inc. in the dispute.

In a legal brief filed on Monday with the Supreme Court, the U.S. Department of Justice said the 1992 ruling may have to be overruled because it no longer fits with the rise of modern day e-commerce in which online retailers can replicate the shopping experience of a physical store even where it has no physical property.

"A physical-presence requirement ... bears no logical relationship to current economic conditions, and imposes intolerable burdens on the states' ability to collect tax revenue they are lawfully owed," Solicitor General Noel Francisco said in the brief.

The U.S. Government Accountability Office estimated in a November report that states and municipalities could gain between $8 billion and $13 billion in annual revenue if they could require online retailers to collect sales tax. Forty-five of the 50 states have a statewide sales tax.

Some online retailers, including leading player Amazon.com Inc., already collect state sales tax.

Traditional retail industry groups argue that e-commerce businesses have an unfair advantage over brick-and-mortar competitors by being able to avoid collecting sales tax.

The Supreme Court will hear arguments in April and make a decision by the end of June. REUTERS

Richard A. Carranza, who was praised for reopening Houston schools just two weeks after Hurricane Harvey, will succeeded Carmen Fariña as NYC schools chancellor. NYC.GOV

Houston schools superintendent named NYC schools chancellor

After a brief hiccup, the search for the city's next schools chancellor ended Monday as Richard A. Carranza, the superintendent of the Houston Independent School District, was named to the post.

Carranza notably reopened Houston schools just two weeks after Hurricane Harvey devastated much of the region last August. Prior to joining HISD in August 2016, he was superintendent of the San Francisco Unified School District, which saw historically high graduation rates during his tenure.

Carranza began his education career in Tucson, first as a high school bilingual social studies and music teacher then as principal. He also oversaw 66 schools and more than 66,000 students as a regional superintendent for Las Vegas' Clark County School District prior to his four years in San Francisco.

"Richard Carranza understands the power of public education to change lives, and he has a proven record of strengthening public schools and lifting up students and families," Mayor Bill de Blasio said. "He understands the tremendous work New York City educators do every day to put our children on the path to success. Richard is the right person to lead our school system forward as we build on the progress we've made over the past four years and make our vision of equity and excellence for every child a reality."

Carranza will replace Carmen Fariña, who said her successor is "philosophically on the same page."

"He has a proven track record as an educator with a laser focus on what's in the classroom," she added. "He's made critical investments in professional development, strengthened the leadership pipeline for principals and has immersed himself in the community to empower families. Every step of his career, he's focused on equity for all, not just some."

"As the son of blue collar workers and a lifetime educator, it is an honor to serve New York City's 1.1 million children as schools chancellor," Carranza said. "I will work every day to further the progress Chancellor Fariña has made in strengthening our public schools for generations to come."

Carranza was appointed just four days after Alberto Carvalho, superintendent of Miami-Dade County Public Schools, accepted then turned down the position held by Fariña since 2014. NIKKI M. MASCALI

US judge orders ex-drug executive Shkreli to give up $7.36 million

Former drug company executive Martin Shkreli may have to give up a Picasso and a one-of-a-kind Wu-Tang Clan album, after a U.S. judge on Monday ordered him to forfeit $7.36 million following his conviction of defrauding investors.

U.S. District Judge Kiyo Matsumoto in Brooklyn said the assets Shkreli could forfeit to satisfy the judgment also include $5 million in a brokerage account and his stake in Vyera Pharmaceuticals, one of the drug companies he founded.

Shkreli is scheduled to be sentenced for securities fraud on Friday.

A lawyer for Shkreli could not immediately be reached for comment on the judge's order.

Shkreli, 34, has been in jail since September, when Matsumoto revoked his bail after he offered a $5,000 bounty for a strand of Hillary Clinton's hair in a Facebook post.

Shkreli became notorious as the "Pharma Bro" when he raised the price of anti-parasitic drug Daraprim by over 5,000 percent in 2015 while he was chief executive officer of Turing Pharmaceuticals. Turing is now Vyera.

In December 2015, Shkreli told Bloomberg Businessweek that he had bought the Wu-Tang Clan's "Once Upon a Time in Shaolin" when the hip-hop group auctioned the sole copy of the album to the highest bidder. Bloomberg reported that he paid $2 million for it.

Shkreli has also boasted of owning a Picasso painting.

A jury found Shkreli guilty last August of securities fraud charges unrelated to Daraprim. They determined that he lied to investors about the performance of two hedge funds he ran, MSMB Capital and MSMB Healthcare. He also was found guilty of conspiring to manipulate the stock price of another drug company he founded, Retrophin Inc. REUTERS

Hundreds of arthritis sufferers from tri-state area calling weekly to f

By Matt Edgar

America's Health Writer

New York City - Everyone has said it at one time or another. If I had only known about "this" sooner - things would be very different today.

That's what many knee arthritis pain sufferers are saying about this technology and treatment.

"We all know that countless lives are being saved every year because of early detection and better treatment" noted the clinic director at the NY Pain MD in New York City. "The same holds true for treating arthritis pain. I believe we are having so much success at NY Pain MD because of two factors: One is we are using advanced medical technology and treatments many clinics do not use. And second, the word has spread to our community and so many knee arthritis sufferers are coming in sooner. And the earlier we can treat knee arthritis - the better the results. The key to trying to avoid knee replacement surgery is doing the correct treatment as soon as possibly"

What is the "correct treatment?"

"That depends," said the director. "There is no one answer when it comes to medical conditions. Knee arthritis is no different. That's why, if you have knee pain, you should have it evaluated by a doctor who deals with and treats knee pain every day," added the director.

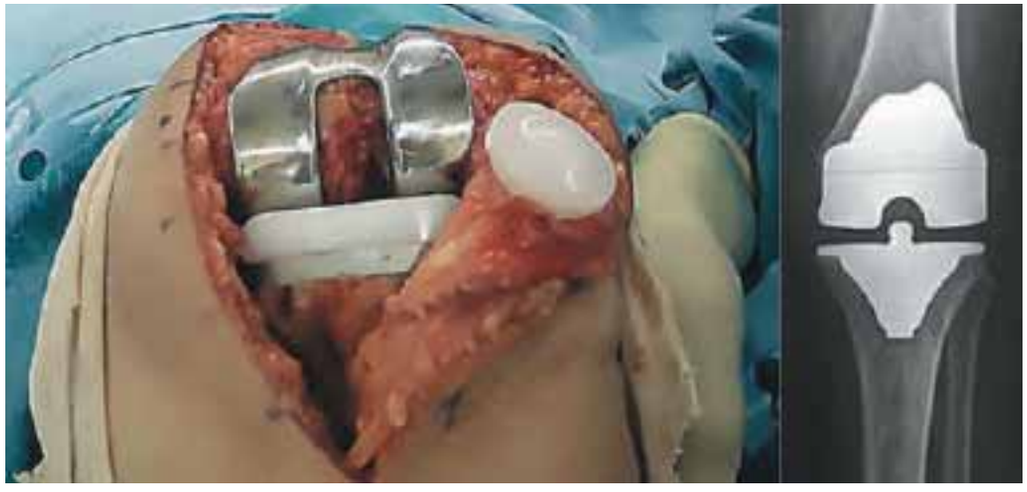
For many knee arthritis pain sufferers the right treatment is Viscosupplementation whereby a preparation of Hyaluronic acid a gel-like FDA approved medicine is applied directly into the knee joint using Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology.

Hyaluronic acid is the natural lubricant and shock absorber of your joints and is found to be decreased in arthritis sufferers. This is similar to running your without oil. Obviously, the sooner you put oil back in the car - the less damage will be done. That's why some doctors feel early viscosupple- cosupplementation gets the best results and is so important for avoiding surgery.

The director believes one of the most important factors for the success of viscosupplementation is making sure you are getting it into the joint space precisely. That's why the doctors at NY Pain MD use advanced imaging technology to apply *Precision Arthritis Targetin*g during every treatment.

A device called the "C-Arm" allows the doctor to see into the joint and actually watch the medicine be applied exactly where it is supposed to. Research shows that performing procedures without Precision Arthritis Targeting (P.A.T.T.) can result in missing the joint space as much as 30% of the time. If you had viscosupplementation treatments without Presision Arthritis Targeting Technology and did not get good results - this may be why.



Can This Be Avoided? Total knee replacement is serious surgery requiring months of rehabilitation. Some doctors think modern treatments done early enough can keep baby boomers from going under the knife

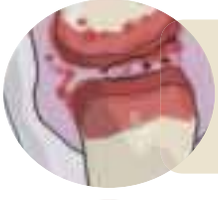
Everyone Wants Proof:

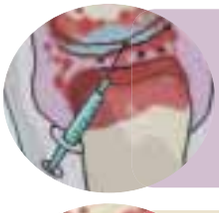
In the artist simulated drawings, picture #1 is a normal, pain-free knee. There is no arthritis and the knee can move and bend freely without pain.



Knee With Painful Arthritis

Pain -

Illustration shown is a knee joint with painful xosteo-arthritis. Arthritis causes the joint space to decrease, grinding, stiffness, decreased motion, bone spurs, swelling and a lot of pain.



Research Shows Doctors Miss The Joint Space Up To 30% Of The Time Without Advanced Imaging

Failed Treatment -

The injection (Lubrication medicine) misses the joint space. Research shows this occurs up to 30% of the time without the use of the digital imaging to guide the injection. This is why lubrication medicine may not have worked for you ind out if treatment is right for them...Often covered by insurance.

If you qualify for this treatment, it might be one of the happiest days of your life.

That's because, for the 2 ½ years thousands of knee pain sufferers have flocked to the NY Pain MD New York City

That's when their specially trained-doctors added cutting-edge arthritis treatments to their already successful comprehensive knee pain relief program.

Viscosupplementation is unique because - even-though it is manufactured by a pharmaceutical company, it is NOT considered a drug because it is a natural substance with an incredible story.

Why So Many Want It

You see, when you suffer with arthritis - the lubricating fluid (synovial fluid) in your knee joint dries up.

This means instead of gliding smoothly - your bones start to rub and grind against each other.

This causes a little pain in the beginning - but over time the pain steadily gets worse until it is excruciating.

Like "Joint Oil"

Viscosupplementation works so well because it is like 'joint oil." It is a natural substance that contains one of the natural building blocks of the synovial fluid that lubricates your knee.

Scientists and researchers discovered this natural building block to synovial fluid in the rooster's comb - that big red thing on top of the roosters head. It is extracted from the roosters comb, purified and concentrated. They have also developed medical lubricants that are also natural but made a bit like yogurt and "cultured" into highly effective arthritis pain-fighting medical lubricants.

When introduced directly into your knee joint, it is like squirting oil on a rusty door hinge.

Viscosupplementation allows your joints to glide more smoothly eliminating a lot of the rubbing, grinding and pain.

Can Supplements Do The Same Thing?

No. Glucosamine and chondroitin and other supplements are much different. You can only get this from a doctor and it often helps knee pain sufferers who got limited or no success from glucosamine and chondroitin. Beware of unsubstantiated claims made by supplements to do what this advanced medical procedure does.

Why You Should Try This Even If You've Already Had Similar Treatments Without Results...

"We have been able to help so many knee pain sufferers even many who have already tried other treatments like Synvisc, Supartz, Orthovisc and even Hyalgan. This is because our treating doctors always use "Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology". This allows us to place he Viscosupplementation exactly where is needs to be. Studies show doctors doing joint injections without Technology can miss the joint up to 30% of the time." noted the Director of Center

Advanced Medical Technology Can Make All The Difference: This advanced Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology using fluorososcopic imaging allows doctors to see directly into the knee joint so treatments are precise and the FDA approved lubricating medicine actually goes EXACTLY where it is supposed to. Studies show that procedures done without this technology can miss the joint up to 30% of the time. This is one reason Viscosupplementation may not have worked for you in the past. NY Pain MD used this P.A.T. Imaging Technology with each and every treatment.

NY Pain MD is a state of the art medical facility offering the best technology.

And that's not all

"Every case is individual. Some patients get quite a bit of relief right away - others take a little more time. But most have been extremely happy. We've noted results lasting no less than 6 months for many but up to 2 years for some patients.. Patients who were suffering for years with bad knee pain are getting their lives back... going for walks again and exercising. It's amazing to see. They tell all their friends - that's why we are swarmed. After getting treatment and feeling better, many patients have decided to cancel their total knee replacement surgeries." added the director.

How To Find Out If It Can Help You?

If you have knee pain, the NY Pain MD doctors would like to invite you for a no-obligation screening to see if you are a candidate for their treatments using Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology.

John Kelly isn't sure what Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner do all day

The White House chief of staff thinks "Javanka" are changing the president's mind too often.

White House chief of staff John Kelly is frustrated with White House advisers Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump, to the point that he's questioning what exactly they do all day, a new report says.

After downgrading Kushner's security clearance in the wake of the Rob Porter spousal-abuse scandal, Kelly has become upset with the couple's "freelancing" and blames them for changing President Donald Trump's mind on key issues, the Associated Press reported on Monday.

Kushner was the subject of more than one bombshell story last week, each enough to cause a major scandal in a normal presidential administration. The Intercept reported that Kushner supported a blockade of Qatar weeks after his father, Charles, failed to secure financing for their real-estate business from that country's government. The New York Times reported that Kushner accepted millions in loans from two companies after meeting with them at the White House.

Over the weekend, President Trump seemed to be in a jovial mood about his son-in-law: At the annual Gridiron Dinner, he joked that Kushner "couldn't get through security." But a Times report last week said he had complained to Kelly about Kushner and his daughter and was asking Kelly for help in pushing the duo out of the White House.

The AP's sources say "Javanka" have no plans to go. For her part, only a few months ago Ivanka had planned to become the first female president. In "Fire & Fury," Michael Wolff reported that she and Jared had an "earnest deal" that she would run for the job after working in the Oval Office.

As for Kushner, it's unclear how much of his job is left. Last week, CNN reported that after Kelly's changes, the White House calligrapher has a higher security clearance than Kushner.

But last month, Kelly said he was confident the president's son-in-law could still be effective. "As I told Jared days ago, I have full confidence in his ability to continue performing his duties in his foreign policy portfolio including overseeing our Israeli–Palestinian peace effort and serving as an integral part of our relationship with Mexico," he said. "Everyone in the White House is grateful for these valuable contributions to furthering the president's agenda. There is no truth to any suggestion otherwise."

THE FOREMAN FORECAST: SPEAK NO EVIL

TOM FOREMAN

Analysis

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

Former Trump campaign aide Sam Nunberg has greeted a subpoena to testify in the Russia investigation with the kind of diplomatic flair legends are made of. "Screw that," he told CNN. "Why do I have to go? For what?"

Nunberg, who says he has already spent several hours talking to investigators, insists he is not hiding anything. He just thinks he's being pushed to say someone, somehow colluded with the Russians in the last election, and he says that did not happen. But his action has raised a fascinating question: What if Donald Trump wanted to do the same thing? What if special counsel Robert Mueller decides the president must sit down for questioning and the chief executive simply says no?

With any other president, this would be a spurious question. While a traditional prez might equivocate, delay, invoke executive privilege and so on, a flat-out refusal would seem unlikely. But Trump has already proven he is not like any other president. He ignores rules. He breaks with custom. He shatters protocols. And he has repeatedly called the Russia investigation a "witch hunt," an attempt to delegitimize his electoral win and discredit his name.

The idea of him refusing to lend any hand — even under subpoena — does not seem far-fetched to me. And if he were to take such a stance, here is the next question: What can anyone do about it? You might say he should be arrested in such a case, but this is the president of the United States. Many of the people who would be tasked with making him comply actually work for him. So again: If Mueller eventually says, "You must talk," and Trump says, "I won't," who wins?

It's an academic question for now. Trump has not been compelled to testify, and he has not refused. Indeed, the question may never come up. But if it does, we could quite plausibly see a contest of legal might, the likes of which is rarely seen even in the big-ego, strong-will world of Washington.

Half-price lunch deal for the next two weeks

The best things in life are free, but a week of half-price lunches is not a bad compromise.

Over 400 restaurants across New York City are offering special dishes up to half off during lunch now through March 16 to users of Ritual, an app that lets you order and pay ahead to skip the wait when you pick up your meal.

Deals during Ritual Eats Week include Chopt's Mexican Caesar Salad for $3.60, a Fika latte for $2.07, and Fuku's fried chicken fingers for $3.50 (only at the downtown Brookfield Place location).

Besides the great deals, skipping the line during lunch is the kind of clutch hookup that can save a workday, when your wait is as long as your actual break.

There is one piece of bad news, though — this deal only works if you've got an iPhone and Apple Pay.

While the deals are limited to specific dishes during lunch for this promotion, normally you can order anything from thousands of restaurants using Ritual. A feature to enjoy even after cheap midday eats expire is the app allows you to combine orders, so no need to Venmo out a complicated office group receipt.

Mindy's newest project

Kaling's sitcom drops this week —and you're gonna wanna watch.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Mindy Kaling's been working up a storm (thank God), and Thursday her latest project hits the small screen.

"Champions" revolves around Vince (Anders Homs), a charismatic gym owner whose life as a bachelor is turned upside down when his high-school fling Priya (Kaling) drops off their gay teenage son Michael (J.J. Totah) to live with him and pursue his Broadway dreams.

But while Kaling only has a supporting role in the show, she's still heavily involved as its co-creator and writer, and her influence and comedic imprint is all over it.

Metro spoke with her co-creator, Charlie Grandy, to get the lowdown on "Champions."

Where did this seemingly bizarre story come from?

I've been working with Mindy for a long time, on five projects, and she said to me, "I have this rough idea about a half-Indian gay teenager moving from Cleveland to New York to pursue his Broadway dreams. Does that sound interesting to you?" And immediately I said, "Yeah." I have to admit I would have said yes whatever, because it was Mindy. But that idea specifically felt very timely and interesting.

Timely why?
Mindy and I have been working now for a combined total of 40 years. So we were like, "Who is a fun character that we haven't seen on TV?" Someone with a strong point of view, a really hot take and someone who would always be on their phone. This was a young, fun energy to write for. And wouldn't be cowed by all the forces in the world that he goes up against. We didn't reverse-engineer it. We didn't ask, "What's going to be zeitgeisty?" It was about what's going, interesting and compelling.

Did you feel a responsibility to explore certain topics?
Your only responsibility as a comedy is to be funny. We don't want to be preachy or lecture. But when you stumble across something that's interesting, juicy and topical you want to then represent both sides, both comedically and intelligently.

GETTY

You just want to handle these topics in the right way.

Let's talk Anders Holm.
Anders sets the tone — he's a leader on set. He's always on, but not in an annoying way. He himself is an incredible writer, so her understands structure and jokes, and gets it from that point of view. When we first talked to Anders he was concerned about the details of the character — what he wanted, what was his deal. Rather than it being about how he was funny.

Why are sitcoms still relevant?
They're easy to digest. The storytelling in sitcoms has learned a lot from drama over the last 10 years. It's not just funny, but compelling, too. We just want it to feel like a familiar, great place to hang out in. That's the tone of a network sitcom. You never want television to feel like homework. Sometimes it does, though.

Your homework? Watch "Champions" on Thursday, March 8, at 9:30pm on NBC.

How to celebrate National Day of Unplugging in NYC

From sundown Friday, March 9 through sundown Saturday, March 10, get off the grid for your mental health.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

If you're like most Americans, chances are you're on your phone too often. Research shows that tech addiction, although not on the same level as drug or alcohol dependence, is certainly a habit-forming behavior that can negatively affect our mental health and wellbeing.

A 2017 study in Sage Journal found a correlation between the amount of time teens spent on smartphones and social media and a rise in depressive and suicidal symptoms.

There are efforts in place to curb the compulsion to check Instagram or click on every news push notification that pops up on your screen. Apps like Forest help you cut down on phone time by setting a countdown timer for how long you'd like to stay away (if you touch your phone during that window, the app will send you messages like "Don't look at me"), while Moment tracks how much time you spend on your phone and gives you the option to set daily limits.

If you could use a little community incentive, there's a real-life challenge to get off the grid: The National Day of Unplugging, happening from sundown Friday, March 9, through sundown Saturday, March 10.

The ninth annual 24-hour digital detox is the brainchild of global Jewish nonprofit Reboot and draws inspiration from the Sabbath, the weekly Jewish tradition of observing the holy day of rest beginning every Friday at sundown.

You can observe the phone-fast any number of ways, but if you need a little inspiration, Reboot has organized events nationwide to give you an alternative to being on your phone.

In New York, spend Saturday afternoon gripping the climbing wall instead of your device at Brooklyn Boulders (Queensbridge location), which is hosting a National Unplugging Day event from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. In addition to free rein to climb, there will be live music by Arin Maya, a yoga class led by Lululemon, a workshop on "setting intentions," a mate tea ceremony and more. (Free for members, $19/guests, tickets and full schedule at brooklynboulders.com.)

At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, the JCC Harlem hosts "Unplugged: Tales of Addiction," an evening of stories about "emails you wish you never sent, Facebook arguments you wish you never had and your first OK Cupid profile." Arrive at 7:10 to participate in Havdalah, a ritual that marks the end of Sabbath with song. (Tickets $12, wine included, at jccmanhattan.org.)

Find more information at nationaldayofunplugging.com.

Lack of change could cost Hornacek his job

New York's head coach hasn't had an easy run at Madison Square Garden.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Jeff Hornacek has not had it easy as the head coach of the New York Knicks over the past two seasons.

Dysfunction from his players up to the front office hasn't given him much of a chance to seriously contend and get the Knicks back into the playoffs for the first time since 2013.

The departure of Phil Jackson and Carmelo Anthony prior to this season looked as though it would give Hornacek a fresh start with Kristaps Porzingis poised to take over as the leading man at Madison Square Garden.

But a torn ACL limited Porzingis' first All-Star campaign to just 48 games and ended any semblance of hope that the Knicks could squeak into the playoffs.

Entering tonight's game against the Portland Trail Blazers, the Knicks are nine games out of the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference with a 24-40 record; just two losses away from a fifth-consecutive sub-.500 season.

In his 146 games as Knicks head coach, Hornacek has been an abysmal 55-91, which would normally be an unacceptable mark for a big-market franchise. But general manager Scott Perry gave Hornacek a vote of confidence in early February to at least finish out the season.

It obviously remains to be seen what New York's plan will be come the offseason as Hornacek has one more year remaining on his contract.

Jeff Hornacek has not done much tinkering with his lineup despite the Knicks losing 12 of their last 13. GETTY IMAGES

With nothing else to lose this year though, one might expect the head coach to throw caution to the wind with a roster filled with players — like Emmanuel Mudiay, Trey Burke, Michael Beasley and Troy Williams — that have a lot to prove at the NBA level.

Instead, Hornacek has coached conservatively as it looks like he is trying to take the safe route in order to save his job for next season.

He's been hesitant to shake up the lineup, especially with Beasley struggling. In his last five games, he's averaging just 7.4 points on 34.1-percent shooting from the field.

Hornacek has veteran Lance Thomas to step in, but there is also a pair of G-Leaguers who might as well get an extended look at the NBA level in Luke Kornet and Isaiah Hicks. Hicks received minutes in Sunday night's loss to the Sacramento Kings but Kornet has appeared in just one game since Valentine's Day.

A reason as to why Hornacek hasn't shaken things up yet is unclear as he told the media on Sunday night that it's because of "certain things."

If it's because of management's desires to keep the current lineup intact, that's one thing. If it's an unwillingness to take a risk and find the best possible lineup with what the Knicks have left, then Hornacek's timidness might lead to him being shown the door this summer.

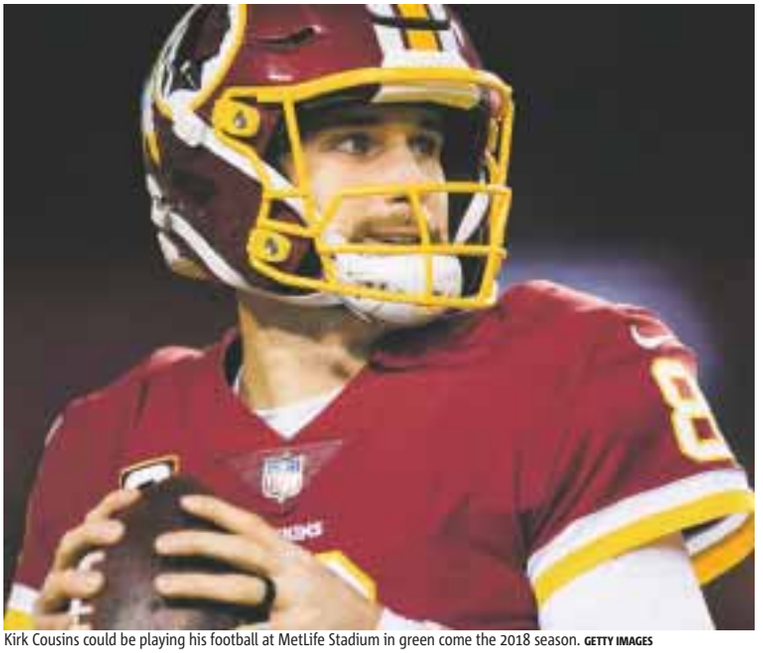
Cousins between Jets, Vikings

The soon-to-be free-agent quarterback already has his list narrowed down to two teams.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us



Kirk Cousins could be playing his football at MetLife Stadium in green come the 2018 season. GETTY IMAGES

We're still eight days away from the start of the NFL's free agency period, but it looks as though quarterback Kirk Cousins already has a good idea of where he wants to go.

According to Bleacher Report's Matt Miller, Cousins has his list narrowed down to two possible destinations: the Minnesota Vikings and New York Jets.

Earlier on Monday, ESPN's Adam Schefter reported that Cousins' list was down to four teams, the two others being the Denver Broncos and Arizona Cardinals

The 29-year-old does not officially become a free agent until Mar. 14, but speculation as to where he will end up has been swirling at gale-force speeds ever since the Washington Redskins traded for veteran passer Alex Smith.

It will be the end of a tumultuous relationship that saw the Redskins place the franchise tag on Cousins in each of the last two offseasons as they were unwilling to give him a long-term contract despite him holding three of the four best passing seasons in franchise history.

Now he has the chance to receive a hefty payday while becoming the face of a franchise under center. The problem is, he could be facing the decision of going for the most money possible or winning sooner.

The Jets have a ton of money to throw at Cousins this offseason as they have an approximate estimation of $100 million in cap space. Reports (via Brian Costello of the New York Post) in late February suggested that New York would be willing to offer the quarterback a whopping $60 million in the first year of his contract.

While Cousins would be an astronomically wealthy man should he decide to sign with the Jets, he might have to wait a while before his team becomes serious contenders. Coming off a 5-11 season that was considered an overachievement, he won't have the kind of offensive weapons that the Vikings have.

The NFC runner-up has a far-more vaunted offense with dangerous receivers in Adam Thielen and Stefon Diggs. They also have a healthy Dalvin Cook in the backfield, who showed during his brief rookie season that he can take away an opposing defense's focus off the passing game, opening things up for a passer like Cousins, who has eclipsed the 4,000-yard mark in each of the last three years.
